Deciding rules

When the stem says	Think of	Not when
Answer quality judged from several perspectives	LLM as a judge with rubrics, plus human review	The judge has not been checked against known answers
Compare models or settings on one dataset	Bedrock model evaluation jobs	A single live session, which canary or shadow tests cover
Only the retrieved passages are in question	Retrieve-only evaluation	The generated answer itself must be judged for faithfulness
Release gate on fixed cases before promotion	Golden dataset regression run in the pipeline	The risk only shows on real traffic, where a canary fits
A model update may shift answers	Post-update validation with synthetic users and drift checks	A question about speed alone, where latency metrics fit
Reply stops mid-sentence or ignores later text	Stop reason, then input size and dropped context	The error is a throttle code, which needs quota metrics
Calls fail only inside a VPC	Route, private DNS, endpoint policy, and security group checks	The error is a plain quota or throttle code
Output format breaks a downstream parser	Schema validation in code	A prompt sentence that asks for the format, since wording is only a request

Etch lines

1. Latency charts cannot tell you whether an answer is right.
2. Read the stop reason before you read the content of a reply.
3. An LLM judge needs checks on known answers before you trust it.
4. Change one prompt element per run so each result is traceable.

5. Prompt wording can ask for a format, but only code enforces it.
6. Test retrieval before generation to find whether the index or the model failed.

Flash questions

- Q: Before trusting an LLM judge, what must you check first? A: Its scores on known good and known bad answers.
- Q: Which Bedrock feature compares models on one dataset as a managed job? A: Bedrock model evaluation jobs.
- Q: What should a golden dataset regression gate do when quality falls below its threshold? A: Fail the pipeline stage so the release stops.
- Q: A reply stops mid-sentence. What do you check first? A: The stop reason, then input size and dropped context.
- Q: Which four checks cover a call that fails only inside a VPC? A: Route, private DNS, endpoint policy actions, and security group rules.
- Q: What does a 429 mean compared with a 503? A: 429 means the account exceeded its quota, and 503 means temporary service limits.
- Q: When an answer cites the wrong section, which test runs first? A: Retrieve, because the passage is wrong before the answer is written.
- Q: What helps a dashboard show which prompt version produced each result? A: Tagging logs with the prompt version.
